The competition provided was to see how much of a set course a competitor could do within a stated time, with each control worth 10 points and a penalty of 10 points for each minute or part of a minute late. Competitors could omit any controls they wished, but could not return later to an omitted control. Some competitors decided simply to run the entire course rather than “enjoy” the Score element , which was fine, but they have been shown in the results as if they had entered the competition.
